Short Term Investment Stimulates Long Term Achievement: Use Stimulus Funds to Improve Student Literacy

Educators can use the support from the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act – ARRA – (the recently enacted economic stimulus package) to help all students achieve literacy by helping teachers develop the skills they need to effectively teach literacy.

WILSON® programs and professional development models meet the criteria for ARRA funding.

Wilson programs achieve the highest academic standards by preparing teachers to implement scientifically-based instructional strategies. Let Wilson Language Training re-energize your school or district's literacy action plan using ARRA funding through Title 1, IDEA, State Stabilization Fund mechanisms.

Adopt Wilson programs using ARRA funds to:

- Build teacher ability to improve literacy with scientifically-based instructional methodologies
- Improve effectiveness with students who have the greatest need through professional development training and programs
- Train teachers to use new reading curricula
- Improve coordination of special education and language support services
- Meet the needs of historically underserved populations
